

Here, the Court recently granted the Government's motion to dismiss original counts 1, 2, 3, 6, 8, and 10, of the Superseding Indictment, which were specific intent crimes. The crimes with which Mr. Mullendore is now charged are general intent crimes, and diminished capacity is not a defense to a general intent crime. United States v. Reed, 991 F.2d 399, 400 (7th Cir. 1993).

Mr. Mullendore does not contest this point, and concedes that his diminished capacity defense is inapplicable to the remaining charges. Dkt. 71 at 1–2.

Therefore, the Court finds that diminished capacity evidence, testimony, or argument is irrelevant, inadmissible, and improper as to the charges currently pending in this matter. The United States’ Motion in Limine (Dkt. 69) is GRANTED. If the parties wish to renew any arguments as the trial unfolds, they are free to approach the bench and do so. See United States v. Connelly, 874 F.2d 412, 416 (7th Cir. 1989) (emphasizing that an order either granting or denying a motion in limine is “a preliminary decision . . . subject to change based upon the court’s exposure to the evidence at trial”).

SO ORDERED.
